Award winning emerging photographer Mark Kasumovic hosts first solo-exhibition at Toronto Imageworks Gallery

Toronto based artist Mark Kasumovic is exhibiting his latest body of work for his first major solo-exhibition at Toronto Imageworks Gallery. The project, "I Can Hear You Humming", follows a network of power lines as they make their way throughout our city and beyond.

Invisible to us, electricity gently hums through the landscape and powers the world around us. At first they seem out of place: giant heaps of metal and wire; yet somehow they have embedded themselves into our visual culture, almost becoming as invisible to us as the energy that they carry. "I have grown to view the power grid as an endless modernist sculpture," says Kasumovic, "at times arranging themselves in an iconic way that both defies their utilitarian nature and captures the power that they truly represent."

Kasumovic's work is not going unnoticed by both the local and national community. In the past year alone, he was selected as the only Ontario winner in the Bank of Montreal's annual Art! First Competition. He has also been selected for Canadian publisher The Magenta Foundation's list of 'Emerging Photographers' and awarded the TD Canada Trust Snap!Stars award for ACT's annual SNAP! live-auction fundraiser.

The exhibition will feature twelve large scale photographs and will be on display from January 5th to February 3rd. Opening reception on Thursday, January 7th from 6pm to 9pm at Toronto Imageworks Gallery at 80 Spadina Ave. Further exhibition details available at www.torontoimageworks.com, and artist information can be obtained at www.markkasumovic.com.
